Soon after 7 o'clock Horhwath arrived at the Miller yard for a load of heavy yellow pine planking to be delivered at the Fairfield Rubber Works, for the Park City Lumber company.

The employes of the Miller yard were sent to the pile of yellow pine plank to load Horhwath's wagon. In loading, the middle of the pile was removed, leaving two stacks about 10 feet in height, and one pland wide, standing. Horhwath, although not supposed to do any of the loading, except when the sticks were turned over to him from the pile, approached the single stack upon which the men were at work and attempted to put a roller and attempted to p the sticks were turned over to him from the pile, approached the single stack apon which the men were at work and attempted to put a roller under the planks. Horhwath was caught and his life was crushed out in an instant. His body lay beneath a dozen heavy yellow pine timbers a foot wide and three inches thick. Yard Foreman Reardon was brought to the scene of the accident immediately and ordered the mass of timber removed from the body.

The emergency ambulance was called, but it was only needed to remove the remains to Rourke & Rourke's morgue.

Funeral Director James T. Rourke took the reporters in his automobile to the home of the dead man at 212 Pine street. The wife and an infant child of the victim of the accident were found there. The wife was ignorant of the terrible bereavement which had befallen her and was calmly washing. She could not speak English and was tunable to understand the efforts being made to tell her of her loss.

Renjamin Bleier, a baker, at 200 Pine street, was called. He broke the news to the woman with as much considera-

Yard Foreman Reardon, at the lumber yard, said that he regretted the accident very much, but declared it was entirely out of his jurisdiction. The dead man was not compelled to assist in removing the planks from the pile and was only expected to take them when turned over to him to be placed on his wagon. It is at all times dangerous to pass between the piles of heavy planks and the employes of the yard are very cautious. He could not see, he said, that any one was to blame for the accident but Horhwath himself.

The body was viewed at Rourke & Rourke's morgue by Medical Examiner Downs, who found the skull crushed to pulp, both legs broken and ribs crushed in. In fact that is hardly a crushed in. In fact that is haruly a whole bone in the victim's body. The medical examiner gave his decision according to the facts, without comment.

Hartford, April 28 .- After spending more than two hours to-day on the public utilities commission bill the matter in the air and it will come up immediately upon the opening of tomorrow's session. The only definite action taken to-day was the voting down of the motion to re-commit to the judiciary committee made last week by Mr. Chandler of Rocky Hill and the declaration by the Speaker, that a motion of Mr. Whiton of New London to refer the entire matter to the committee of the whole was out of order under the rules of the House. (By Bysantius Moschopoppoious, staff correspondent of the United

Constantinople, April 28.-Abdul Hamld, the deposed Sultan of Turkey, has been sent to Salonica under a guard of Young Turks, After first deciding to imprison the deposed ruler in the Tcheragan palace the Young Turks changed their minds and decided upon Salonica as the place of confinement. Salonica is the great stronghold of the Young Turks and it is believed that Abdul will have less chance of engaging in intercourse with friends than at Tcheragan Palace. The deposed ruler was allowed to take 11 wives with him. He was placed aboard a train during the night, such secrecy being observed that the Young Turks had changed their plans. If the former Sultan accepts his defeat gracefully and does not attempt again to override the Young Turks nor stir up dissensions it is expected that he will be permitted to return to Constantinople and become a prisoner in the Tcheragan Palace.

Salonica, April 28.-Abdul Hamid arrived here this afternoon aboard a special train from Constantinople. A heavy guard attended him. The deposed ruler appeared feeble and broken-hearted and his faithful servants had almost to carry him from the train to the carriage in waiting. He was taken at once to the residence of General Robikat at Villa Lapini, the Kalamarai suburb, General Robikat is commandant of the gendarmery.

The Salonica air is very enervating and, it is believed that the change will materiall affect the Sultan's heart. The general opinion is that this is just what the new administration desired. Attempts to get a statement from Abdul were frustrated by the guard. The only comment that he has made on his dethronement has been that it is the will of Allah.
